INAX

ABOUT INAX

The history of INAX can be traced back over 100 years, to when our forefathers partnered with the preeminent American architect Frank Lloyd Wright in their relentless efforts to create and curate the finest tile in the world – the tile that would be used to build the Imperial Hotel. By determining the properties of clay and the impact of fire, through numerous trials, they succeeded in the large-scale production of the decorative tiles that were both unique and proprietary to Japan's most grand hotel. This is the foundation of INAX.

YUKI

The Yuki name comes from the Japanese words for glaze (Yu) and seasons (ki). Each color variation evokes an essence of the seasons. The standard white color represents winter snow, the red represents the summer sun and the black represents the night sky in a mid-autumn day. The gently curved Yuki form is naturally created by using split bamboo, a popular material in Japan.

SENTOUSAI

"Kawarabei" Traditional artisans in Japan had an eco-aware custom of reusing old roof tiles of various shapes as material for the exterior walls of new houses. These walls show fragments of these roof tiles kneaded into them. INAX's Sentousai tiles recreate the natural textures of these kawarabei, i.e., plaster (mud) walls. Three types of tiles, all with different thicknesses, make up Sentousai. The lights and shadows produced by these differences in thicknesses are a unique feature of these unusual Sentousai tiles.
